Your 2015 Mial Williamson and Alumni Association Scholarship Winners

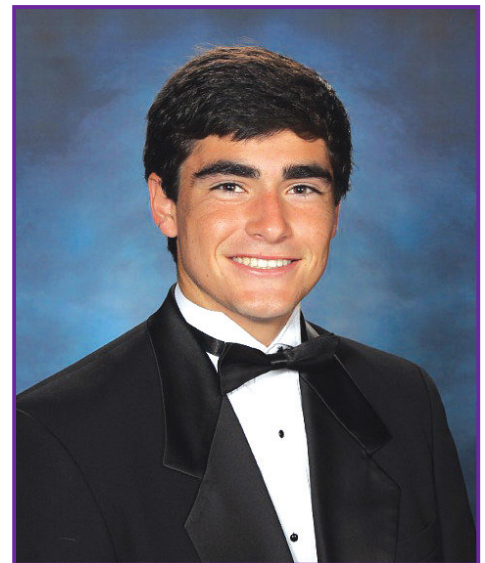

by Tom Hamilton '95

The Broughton Alumni Association has completed its annual process of awarding two distinct honors to members of the current graduating class. Once again, we are pleased to announce that we are able to honor two very deserving students with scholarship awards. Both of these students entered Broughton as freshmen, spent the last four years gaining new academic ability, serving the Broughton community and demonstrating what it means to represent Broughton High School through high moral character.

This year, the Alumni Scholarship is a renewable award of $3,000 per year, and it is payable over four years. The task of selecting this year's winner was no easy one as the committee received a record number of applications. Taylor Boole is this year's winner because he demonstrates a continued dedication to Broughton through academic and athletic excellence. He completed a rigorous schedule leading him to the top five percent of his class. Additionally, he was involved in the Hi-Times, Service Club and other Broughton community activities. He excelled as an athlete as well being part of the storied men's tennis program during his time at Broughton. Taylor will attend UNC Chapel Hill this fall.

The Mial Williamson award also places an emphasis on athletics. This year's recipient will receive a $4,000 one-time award. This year's recipient demonstrated drive, determination and leadership while at Broughton, attending early-morning swim team practices throughout her career. The 2015 winner is Emma Wilson, who participated in many extra-curricular activities when she was not swimming. Most notably she was a member of her class council and SAFE (Student Action For the Environment). She also finished her Broughton career as a candidate for the highly regarded International Baccalaureate Diploma. She plans to attend Davidson College this fall.

We wish these and all the graduating seniors much success in their next adventure. Your accomplishments have set a high standard of excellence. We are proud to welcome each of you as the newest members of the Broughton Alumni Association.

MY “MR. ALUMNI ASSOCIATION”

by Charles Johnson '72

How many of you remember the American Express television commercials of the 1970's and 1980's? The ones where an obscure but important person asked the question, "Do you know me?" Look at the photo here and imagine the man asking, "Do you know me?" The Class of 1983 does, and Alumni Association Board members do. Many others may not. But it can be argued that the man in the photo, William Bradley Rudolph ('83), had more impact than anyone on Broughton's Alumni Association over the last 14 or 15 years. Sadly, this past June Brad suffered a brain aneurysm and passed away suddenly.

Brad joined the Board early in 2001. He owned Custom Mail Solutions, a mailing company located diagonally across the street from Broughton. Initially, Brad's role was to mail 24,000 newsletters to alumni. No one could predict how his role would expand as mailing a newsletter isn't as simple as it sounds. With a generous heart and love for the Broughton community, Brad would quickly become an invaluable and irreplaceable asset to the Alumni Association. He grew to epitomize the spirit and philosophy of the Association.

Early on, Brad faced the challenge of re-building a master database that had been severely damaged due to technical issues. Much information was lost; and the data that could be saved contained duplicate names, old addresses, and addresses for deceased classmates. It was labor intensive, but Brad led the charge to compile a clean and accurate database and upgrade our computing system. To accomplish these tasks, Brad reached out to class agents, Board members, and Harris Publications, the company who printed our Alumni Directory. He spent countless hours arranging the data so it would be user-friendly when preparing newsletter labels or class reunion invitations. Brad took it upon himself to physically sort and bundle the newsletters he received from our printer, a task which had previously taken Board members many hours. Later, his business would print our newsletters, saving the Association thousands of dollars through the years. Randy Worth commented that "Brad was generous to a fault and wouldn't charge what he should have. I had to remind him on occasion that he was running a business and had to be fair to himself".

Brad Rudolph

Brad loved reunions so he offered printing and mailing to individual classes and never made a profit when working for a class. In the Spring 2002 Alumni Newsletter, Brad wrote "as an alum, I attempt to make it a break even task". He handled the bulk mail requirements and the Association's fees for postal services, making my job as Treasurer a bit less complicated. He worked closely with the Board to eliminate the mailing of newsletters to recent classes and replace that with email delivery, another step which saved thousands. He also stored files, archives, and memorabilia belonging to the Association at Custom Mail. In short, there were few aspects of the Association's delivery of service to alumni in which Brad was not involved.

Perhaps what is most telling about Brad is how much he was loved by family, friends, colleagues, and his church family at Westminster Presbyterian. You should have attended his funeral--if you could find a seat! The ushers kept setting out folding chairs at the back of the church, but some people were still standing. I've seen Easter Sunday services that were not as well attended! Stories about what Brad had done for the community, his church, and the people who loved him. Women sobbed and men wiped their glasses. Brad Rudolph touched many people in his 50 years. Debbie Martin recalled that Brad was "dedicated to serving alumni. He was always willing to help anyone". Kathie Raymond remembered Brad's gentle, easy going manner. "He was so easy to work with. Nothing bothered him".

He gave so much of himself to others. His was a heart of gold. Randy captured it perfectly when he called Brad "a good soul". Brad's wife, Kari, had been his business partner since they were married in 2007. As a Millbrook graduate, Kari jokes about how Brad could have ever married a non-Broughton girl. She told me "I've never known anyone who loved their school or enjoyed being part of the school's tradition as much as Brad did. Our business was his baby, and I plan to continue to serve Broughton just as Brad always did".

I wish Heaven hadn't needed Brad so soon. During what turned out to be our last conversation, Brad suggested we get together for a beer. We were going to check our schedules and set the date later. One afternoon I stopped by his business to do so, but he had gone to the Post Office. A few days later I received an email about his passing. We never had that beer. I'm looking forward to having a cold one when we meet again.

From the President

Please read Charles Johnson's fine article about Brad Rudolph '83, our fellow board member who passed away suddenly and unexpectedly on June 10, 2015. His support of the Broughton Alumni Association was extraordinary, but beyond that, we will miss a good friend.

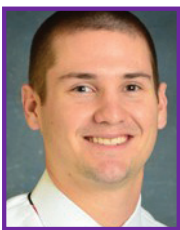

We welcome Brad Leupen '93, Technical Support, Matt Leary '93, Newsletter Editor, LaRonya Askew '94 Reunions/Class Agents/Decade Captains Liaison and Mike Zeblo '09, Treasurer as new members of your board. Regarding the membership of the board, you will notice that we are "trending younger", something which we very much need to do. Our new board members have brought fresh ideas and more up-to-date and more efficient ways of doing things.

As we have noted in earlier newsletters, however, we still receive most of our financial support from the Broughton classes of 1955 through 1969. Therein lies our challenge-stay connected with our more senior alumni but explore new ways to relate to our younger alumni. We need to broaden our base of support from the classes after 1969.

We are setting some financial goals and implementing several initiatives to achieve them-something we have not done previously and we are focusing on newer technology which may enable us to be more relevant to and establish a better rapport with the younger classes.

We had a very disheartening turnout at our Decade Captains/Class Agents Meeting last March. Who knew that UNC was going to play its first NCAA Tournament basketball game that night or that the weather was going to be cold and rainy? In any event, if you are a Decade Captain or a Class Agent and you cannot make a meeting, please do your best to get someone to come in your place. The involvement of Decade Captains and Class Agents is critical to the strength of the Association. If you are listed as an Agent for your Class or a Decade Captain and you cannot serve or do not wish to serve, please let us know so that we may seek someone else to fill the slot.

Welcoming our new board member

Michael Zeblo

Michael Zeblo is originally from Wake Forest. He is the 4th member of his family to attend Broughton. His grandfather, Steven Zeblo; father, Glenn Zeblo; and older brother, Matt Zeblo, attended BHS before him. The 2009 graduate was also varsity baseball player for 4 years. After Broughton, he received a scholarship to play baseball at Davidson College. After Davidson, he decided to pursue a career in Accounting. He graduated with a Masters of Accounting from ECU in December of 2014. He has since been working as a tax accountant at Perkins, Lund, Collar & Associates PLLC. He is currently working on obtaining a CPA license. Fun facts: He loves to play golf and fish in his spare time.

Tom Hamilton

Tom Hamilton, scholarships program coordinator, recently joined the board after serving as a class agent for the last fifteen years. As a Raleigh native, a second generation alumnus, and a former NBHS faculty member, Tom has served Broughton in a number of capacities in the school's community. Tom continues to reside in Raleigh and is currently employed with the Wake County Public School System. Outside of his commitments to Broughton, and when he isn't spending time at the beach, Tom stays busy by being actively involved in his church community and being an uncle to an ever expanding group of nieces and nephews.

LaRonya Askew

LaRonya (Berry) Askew, class of 1994, is a Senior Project Coordinator for a Fortune 500 company in the Research Triangle Park. Her calm perfectionist demeanor, determination, eye for details, negotiation skills and community ties have provided the perfect recipe for all the goals she sets. LaRonya loves to spend her down time with her husband, Kenneth and son Jonathan, along with other numerous family members. She also regularly volunteers for the Diabetes, Alzheimer's and Lung Cancer associations in the area.

Chapel Hill victims' legacy of good lives on

In the raw February days after Deah Shaddy Barakat; a recent Broughton graduate, his wife, Yusor Mohammad Abu-Salha; and her sister, Razan Mohammad Abu-Salha, were shot to death in Chapel Hill, mourners grieved not only the loss of their friends and family members, but the theft from this world of all the good the three young people promised to do during their lives.

And although no amount of altruism will bring them back, their passion for service will live on.

- Earlier this month, volunteers traveled to Turkey to hold two dental clinics for Syrian refugees, taking the place of Barakat and his wife, who were planning a mission trip when they were killed. More than 800 patients got treatment, and a foundation established with money given to the cause will fund such clinics for years to come.
- When classes start next week, seven students – six at N.C. State University and one at UNC-Chapel Hill – will attend school with part of the cost paid by scholarship funds raised in honor of the shooting victims.
- Later this year, a nonprofit launched by the Barakat family plans to open a community resource center in a home in east Raleigh that once belonged to Deah Barakat. The Light House Group – named for Deah, whose name in Arabic means “light” – plans to offer youth services, conduct Muslim outreach and incubate service organizations that need a place from which to launch.

These efforts and others, including the gathering of more than 15,000 cans of food for the Food Bank of Central and Eastern North Carolina, have been a collective response by people in and outside of the victims' Muslim community who heard about the shootings and felt moved to respond.

At times, Deah's older brother, Farris, has struggled to balance the good that has come from the publicity that followed the shootings with what it has cost his and the Abu-Salha families.

“It is too high a price,” he said, walking through the two-story home on North Tarboro Street that is being renovated to become The Light House, which Farris plans to run. “I would rather have my brother back. But I know he is in a better place.”

For those who remain, he said, “Life is a test. Now we're given an opportunity to do something good. We have to take it.”

Farris Barakat said it has been helpful to be occupied with meaningful work as the triple-murder case against Craig Stephen Hicks works its way through the court system.

Broughton Grad's Difficult Path to the UNC Basketball Team

The odds are you've never heard of UNC senior guard Justin Coleman. He appeared in 10 games for the Tar Heels last season.

Coleman

But after joining the team as a walk-on, he's been offered a scholarship for the 2015-16 season, and the story of his past is nothing short of remarkable.

Coleman played high school ball at Broughton High School in Raleigh. In May, 2010, he was playing in an Amateur Athletic Union game when he was clipped by a trailing defender and went down hard into a wall.

Coleman suffered a broken neck and his prognosis was not good.

“My surgeon said when he saw it his heart dropped,” Coleman said. Experts tell us 90 times out of 100 the type of injury Coleman suffered results in paralysis from the neck down, but somehow Coleman was in the lucky 10 percent.

“My whole body was in shock, but I could move everything,” he said. “The whole time they kept getting me to push my toes down and fingers because looking at the x-rays, they didn't understand how I still had feeling.”

Feeling meant a future and doctors told Coleman he'd be back on a basketball court within months.

Coleman put off returning until his senior season. But then the following spring - a year to the day of that dunk attempt - his life pivoted again.

On his way to the pool with his sister, Coleman made a left turn and he never saw motorcyclist Ruben Smith. Smith collided with Coleman's car and died on the spot.

“Accidents happen, but, it's like, I don't see it that way. I'm accountable,” said Coleman.

Charged with failure to yield, Coleman said he was consumed with guilt. But again, a miracle of sorts happened. Smith's wife and mother embraced him at the conclusion of the court case - offering up forgiveness, and a request.

He returned to basketball and was a captain on Broughton's conference title-winning team that year. It was then off to Carolina where he tried out for and made the junior varsity team. Last year, he got the call up to varsity.

“It was surreal, like an out of body experience really,” he said.

Capital Spotlight: Hayes Permar

Garner resident Hayes Permar made a pretty good switch this season.

He swapped paying to watch 15 to 20 professional baseball games to being paid to watch 80. He traded paying for his ball park food to getting it for free.

And instead of entertaining the people sitting around him with his unsolicited commentary, he now entertains the entire stadium as the public address announcer for the Carolina Mudcats.

“Pretty good deal, huh?” Permar said. “I don’t know how you beat it.”

Permar, 36, is in his first season as the stadium voice of the Mudcats, but he got his start on the P.A. as a high school student at Broughton High.

He did the public announcing for the Caps’ girls soccer games during an era when Coach Izzy Hernandez’s clubs were annual state contenders.

He stayed at the microphone for a couple of years after he graduated and even did some of the state championship games during the period. He later went to radio station 850 The Buzz and quickly learned to produce local radio.

Permar is best known as the producer of the syndicated “The David Glenn Show.” In recent years, his role has expanded from running the sound board to include lining up guests and going on air. During the summer months when there are guest hosts, he helps fill the three-hour show with his insights and opinions.

The move to Five County Stadium was a surprise.

The Mudcats were making some changes to their game day operations for this season and gave him a call.

The fit has been good, said Joe Kremer, the Mudcats’ vice president and general manager.

“I don’t think Hayes has ever has a bad day,” Kremer said. “He brings a lot of energy to anything that he does. He has energy and his excitement shows. He comes in and it brightens everyone’s day.”

But Permar is more than the voice of a cheerleader.

“He is a professional,” Kremer said. “He wants the job done the right way. He has been a great addition to our team. And he is very much a part of a group of guys in the booth that want to make the game as enjoyable as possible for our fans.”

Broughton moves to 10-point grading scale

This October, the North Carolina Board of Education approved a new 10-point grading scale for high schools.

This will go into effect for the upcoming freshman class of the 2015-2016 school year.

Previously, the grading scale used by North Carolina high schools has been a 7-point scale.

The implementation of the new 10-point scale will allow high school students applying to college to be more competitive compared to other states that already use a 10-point scale.

“I think having a 10-point scale would be awesome. If I had those three extra points available to pull an A, I could be number one in my class. I wish the new scale was going to apply to me,” sophomore Ben Ralls said.

Ralls’ wish of having a 10-point scale is shared by many students.

Because the grading scale will go into effect only for the freshmen entering in the 2015-2016 school year, all current students will remain on a seven- point scale for the rest of their time as students at Broughton.

“I’m so jealous of the people who are going to have the 10-point scale. I can’t believe its coming just as I’m leaving,” senior Jessica Willetts said.

Junior Adam Geringer has had a significant role in initiating the use of the new ten-point scale.

“Last February I drafted a bill to submit to the NCGA (North Carolina General Assembly), and they then redirected me to the BOE (Board of Education), where I sat down with Rob Hines, who is in charge of grading. I published an article in the News & Observer, which was picked up by a lady from NPR. She published the article which brought even more attention to the issue. Then, later in June I made a presentation to the WCPSS school board on the issue, campaigning...and now here we are.” Geringer said.

Broughton teachers are anticipating how they will assimilate this new grade scale into their classes and grading policies.

“I do not think the new grading scale will have much of an impact on grades because teachers will just adjust how they grade things. We are all going to adapt accordingly,” English teacher Babs Nichols said. The new grading scale also goes along with a change that will reduce the weight of academic and honors courses. With this change, high school students will receive one extra point for AP and IB level courses and half an extra point for honors courses. The NC School Board made these changes in hopes to lower grade inflation and discourage students from packing their schedules with upper-level courses.

Class of 2004 Reunion in Review

The Class of 2004 had an outstanding 10-year reunion over Thanksgiving weekend, 2014. The turnout was excellent with about 150 classmates in attendance. Natty Greene's provided a fantastic venue for old and new friends to reminisce and to celebrate our collective accomplishments over the last decade. We were also treated to a warm address by Richard Matkins, a constant mentor and adviser to our class, about the Margaret Propst Matkins Memorial Scholarship created in honor of the late Margaret Matkins. Our reunion was a great success thanks to all who helped execute it, but mostly thanks to everyone who took time out of their lives to attend so we can continue to foster friendships formed over a decade ago. It was great to see everyone, and I think I speak for the whole class when I say we cannot wait for the next one! NBA and College Basketball Stars Grace the Broughton Court

NBA and local basketball fans had chance a to meet some NBA players and watch them play, all while supporting a great cause August 1, 2015 at Broughton's Holiday Gymnasium.

Passage home and the J.D. Lewis Center hosted a free Family Festival and an all-star exhibition basketball game as part of the "Building a Stronger Raleigh Together" campaign.

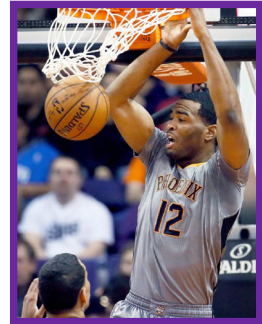

David West of the San Antonio Spurs, T.J. Warren of the Phoenix Suns and N.C. State great Chris Corchiani, as well as other current and former players, played in the exhibition game.

Garner High School and North Carolina State University standout, T.J. Warren, returned to Raleigh to take part in the game. "It's a great opportunity to give back and help the community that helped me," Warren said.

All proceeds supported the BSRT campaign.

Miss Penny's Rules

Many of us who attended Broughton had the pleasure of knowing Miss Penny. Miss Penny instilled a keen respect for grammar in her many students over the years. This is our next installment of our salute to Miss Penny and her 12 Punctuation Rules. Enjoy!

5. Commas separate members of a series.

a. Note: When two or more adjectives are used before a noun, commas separate them if the adjectives are coordinated, that is, if they can be reversed and joined by and. (He wore a shabby, tattered straw hat.)

b. Note: If commas are used within the members of the series, semicolons are used to separate these members. (John, my brother; Susan, my sister; and Joan, my cousin, were all at the picnic.)

c. Examples:

i. The five coordinate conjunctions are and, but, for, or, nor. (Words in a series)

ii. She left the dishes to be washed, to be dried, and to be put away. (Series of infinitives)

iii. The officer gave the orders, the second in rank issued them, and the sailors carried them out. (Sentences in a series)

iv. He said that he was sorry, that he would attend to damages, and that it would never happen again. (Dependent clauses in series)

v. Herbert Hoover, a former President; Richard Nixon, a form Presidential Candidate; and President Kennedy discussed the threatening world crises. (A series of items containing commas)

vi. Before him lay green, rolling meadows. (Coordinate adjectives before a noun)

6. Commas set off nonessential (nonrestrictive) elements (nonessential appositives, nonessential adjective or adverbial clauses, nonessential phrases, independent elements, parenthetical elements, etc.)

a. Examples:

i. Moored and washed down, the boat glistened in the sun. (Nonessential participle phrase)

ii. That is right, isn't it? (Interrogative element)

iii. Yes, he is the one I saw there. (After yes or no)

iv. Carl Sandburg, the poet, lives at Flat Rock. (Nonessential appositive)

v. Carl Sandburg, who is a poet, lives at Flat Rock (Nonessential adjective clause)

vi. A gentleman is a man, who can disagree without being disagreeable. (Essential adjective clause)

vii. Sam is at Duke, whereas John is at Carolina. (Nonessential adverbial clause)

7. Commas set off words of direct address.

a. Examples:

i. I will not be able to attend the dinner, Miss Jones; but I believe that I can be there in time for the program.

ii. John, would you like to make a report on the present outlook for peace?

iii. What is the correct answer, Miss Freeman?

8. Commas, question marks, or exclamation marks separate words of saying from the words of a direct quotation.

a. Examples:

i. "I'm driving," said Henry. "Do you want a ride?"

ii. "May I see you again sometime?" John inquired.

iii. "After you leave," sighed Paula, "there will be nothing to do."

iv. "Shut the door!" screamed Frank.

v. "I'm sorry, but I was unable to complete the report," explained Martha.

vi. "Have you read 'Self Reliance' from Emerson's Essays?" asked Tom.

Alumni Decade Captains

Alumni Decade Captains were created to assist the class agents with their reunions. For each five-year period, one captain is designated as the liaison between the agents and the Association. Included in their duties are encouraging classes to have reunions, submitting scheduling, updates in planning and write-ups (including photos) of reunions held to the Association for inclusion in the semi-annual newsletters.

Below are the decade captains who have graciously volunteered to serve as liaisons to the Reunion Committee.

Contact your decade captain if you are unable to contact your class agent.
